Investigating Suicide Notes

 Get a certificate by completing the program.

 Everyone who has completed all steps in the program will get a badge.

ABOUT

Suicide notes are popular pieces of evidence, often conceptualized as a fast track to certifying unnatural deaths as suicides. Despite their popularity, suicide notes are only recovered in a minority of scene responses. Complicating matters further, these notes are sometimes found at scenes that are ultimately not suicides. This course aims to guide students through the wide, and evolving world of the suicide note, focusing on the variability of these messages, not just in scene findings, but form and content as well.

After completing this course, you'll be able to:

- Differentiate between suicide notes and ideation, according to national standards (CDC).
- Identify the role suicide notes play in certifying death, both positive and negative.
- Avoid misconceptions regarding the frequency of note recovery on scenes.
- Anticipate locations of recovery, from secondary scenes to the decedent, themselves.
- Illustrate the common components of a suicide note.
- Recognize the variations of digital notes, from text messages to social media.

- Gain awareness on the world of cybersuicide, including livestreaming fatal injuries.
- Determine if there is a difference between those who do and do not leave notes.
- Identify the evidentiary steps necessary to distinguish genuine and fake notes.

Credit Hours:

This course is accredited for 2 hours of continuing education credit by ABMDI.

Course Access:

30 days from date of purchase.

Hoarding Death Investigation

☐ Get a certificate by completing the program.

☒ Everyone who has completed all steps in the program will get a badge.

ABOUT

Deaths investigated in the setting of a hoard can seem overwhelming if you're not familiar with the challenges of these investigations. This course aims to demystify the hoarding scene by providing the student with a focused look into the scene findings and decedent characteristics unique to these cases. Students who take this course will explore decedent psychology, scene findings, body condition, and cause and manner of death. They will also take a look into one of the most famous hoarding death scene responses of all time: the Collyer Brothers.

After completing this course, you'll be able to:

- Identify common psychological disorders associated with hoarding behavior.
- Recognize physical threats unique to this scene response.
- Differentiate between hoarding v. squalor and object v. animal hoards.
- Identify characteristics unique to this decedent population.
- Narrow down critical points of the scene for evidence collection.
- Narrow down critical points of the scene for photography.
- Anticipate postmortem changes supported by the hoarding environment.
- Identify frequent causes of death supported by the hoarding environment.
- Illustrate what each manner of death may look like in the hoarding environment.

- Recognize the potential for multiple fatality response in these unique scenes.
